WHY REFUSE CITY MONEY?

Clerk at $400 Yearly Refuses Increase in Pay.

Boston.—(I. N. S.)—Interest in the Boston Museum of Fine Arts has mounted apace because of Hanford L. Story. He is a rare gentleman. He distinctly refuses an increase in salary. He is a city employe. Other city employes cannot understand it.

He is a clerk to the Boston Art commission at $400 a year. A budget session of the city council developed the startling, almost disquieting, information to the councillors that Mr. Story is perfectly satisfied with $400. It was explained that Mr. Story in his other capacity of registrar of the Museum of Fine Arts, receives additional salary of from $800 to $900.

Even so, why refuse more money, aspecially city money? That's what worries the political mind.
